Adam Bergeron is an attorney in the Mass Tort Law & Briefing Group at Morgan & Morgan where he works on behalf of plaintiffs in multi-district litigation and class actions in courts around the country. In addition, Adam works on appeals in the federal circuit courts.

Notable cases that Adam has worked on include multi-district litigation against the e-cigarette maker Juul for its safety claims and youth-targeted marketing practices; multi-district litigation against social media companies (Facebook, Instagram, TikTok, Snapchat and YouTube) for mental health injuries suffered by young social media users; multi-district litigation against the manufacturers of GLP-1 RA drugs (such as Ozempic) for gastrointestinal injuries; multi-district litigation against Proton Pump Inhibitor drug makers for kidney injuries; and federal district and appellate litigation against Lockheed Martin Corporation for injuries suffered by plaintiffs exposed to toxic chemicals emitted from a weapons manufacturing facility in Orlando.

Prior to joining Morgan & Morgan, Adam was a partner at a firm in Vermont where he managed the firm's personal injury practice and served as lead counsel in hundreds of cases. Adam has negotiated multi-million dollar settlements, tried cases to verdict, argued appeals at the Vermont Supreme Court, and briefed appeals to the Second and Eleventh Circuit Courts of Appeal.
