Southern Illinois University School of Law - 2018

Adam Irvin's academic and professional journey is a testament to his unwavering commitment to legal excellence and community advocacy. Graduating with distinction from Southern Illinois University Carbondale in 2015 with a Bachelor's degree, Mr. Irvin laid a robust foundation of knowledge and critical thinking skills essential for navigating complex legal landscapes. This formative period not only honed his intellectual prowess but also instilled in him a passion for championing the rights of individuals facing legal challenges. Continuing his academic pursuit, Adam Irvin earned his law degree from Southern Illinois University School of Law in 2018, further solidifying his expertise in the legal realm. As a member of both the Missouri and Illinois state bars, Mr. Irvin stands as a legal beacon, providing steadfast representation to clients in need, particularly in the realm of workers' compensation cases. His dedication to serving the people is evident in his concentration on representing individuals in their workers' compensation battles, ensuring they receive the fair and diligent advocacy they deserve.

Before joining the esteemed team at Morgan & Morgan, Adam Irvin garnered invaluable experience by defending corporations and insurance companies against workers' compensation actions. This unique perspective offered him profound insights into the inner workings of legal processes, enabling him to navigate complexities with precision and empathy. Recently, he received an award from Lawyers of Distinction recognizing excellence in workers' compensation for 2024. Now, as an integral part of the Workers' Compensation department at the St. Louis, Missouri location, Mr. Irvin leverages his comprehensive understanding of Illinois and Missouri workers' compensation laws to provide tailored and effective representation, thereby securing justice and compensation for those injured in the workplace.
