Jeremy Stephens is a dedicated labor and employment attorney based in the Atlanta office of Morgan and Morgan, PA. With a focus on litigating employment rights and discrimination cases, he tackles issues such as overtime wage disputes and civil and human rights violations affecting private sector and federal employees. Jeremy's extensive experience includes representing clients in state and federal courts, as well as federal administrative tribunals, ensuring thorough advocacy across various legal platforms.

Educationally, Jeremy holds a Juris Doctor (J.D.) degree from Rutgers Law School, complemented by a Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) in Political Science and Mass Communication from Purdue University. His academic background equips him with a comprehensive understanding of labor and employment law intricacies. Beyond his legal career, Jeremy is passionate about architecture, real estate development, gardening, physical fitness, music, and spending quality time with his family. His diverse interests contribute to a well-rounded approach to life and work.

Jeremy's commitment to excellence in his legal practice has earned him several prestigious awards and recognitions. Notably, he has been named among the Top 40 under 40 Civil Plaintiff Attorneys in Georgia for multiple years, recognized by The National Black Lawyers Top 40 Under 40, and honored with The Elite Lawyer Award. These accolades reflect Jeremy's dedication, expertise, and success in advocating for his clients' rights and achieving favorable outcomes in his legal endeavors.
