Matt Morgan has built a distinguished career advocating for individuals against powerful interests.

After earning his bachelor's degree from the University of Florida, he graduated with a Juris Doctor from Stetson University College of Law and later refined his negotiation skills through Harvard Law School's Program on Negotiation.

Throughout his career, Matt has secured significant, high-stakes victories in civil litigation, leveling the playing field for his clients in cases involving severe injuries and complex liability. With over 50 civil cases tried to verdict as lead counsel, he has established a reputation for rigorous advocacy, achieving impactful verdicts which offer fair compensation and uphold social accountability. His work goes beyond individual cases, challenging corporate accountability and reinforcing public safety standards.

Matt's legal insight has made him a sought-after commentator, with regular appearances on national television, including "The Today Show," "Good Morning America," "CBS This Morning," Fox News and CNN, among others. His expertise has also been featured in major publications like The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Wall Street Journal, and USA Today.

Practicing law alongside his mother, father, and brothers, Matt is part of a family deeply rooted in the legal community. He considers it a privilege to represent the people, not the powerful, committed to ensuring justice and accountability for those who might otherwise lack a voice.
