From defense to justice: I became the plaintiff's lawyer I once needed.

My commitment to advocating for injury victims began the moment I became one myself. After years of defending insurance companies and employers in litigation, everything changed when I was seriously injured in a car crash. I followed the rules, made the claim, and expected fairness—until the insurer denied me care and blamed me for an accident I didn't cause. I had to hire a plaintiff's attorney to fight for my rights. That experience didn't just open my eyes—it changed the course of my career.

Today, I fight for people like me—people who are hurt, dismissed, and forced to battle insurance companies for the justice they deserve. I represent plaintiffs in serious injury, wrongful death, UM/UIM, premises, and commercial auto cases across Missouri, Illinois, and Wisconsin.

My prior experience inside the defense world gives me rare insight into how claims are evaluated, how insurers minimize payouts, and where the pressure points lie. That knowledge now works in service of the injured—not the insurer.

I've handled thousands of personal injury claims and secured millions in compensation through litigation, mediation, and strategic negotiation. My approach is grounded in empathy, clarity, and results—and I train my team to deliver the same.
