Michael "Mike" Quesada is a Tampa Bay native, born in St. Petersburg, growing up in Clearwater, and attending High School in Tampa. He attended Emory University in Atlanta, where he received his B.B.A in Business Administration in 2001. In 2003, Mike received his Juris Doctorate Degree and Masters of Business Administration from Stetson University and Stetson College of Law.

While attending Law School in Gulfport, he was a research assistant to The Dean of Students, an investigator in The Pinellas County Public Defender's Office, and was awarded the prestigious Victor O. Whele Award for Excellence in Trial Advocacy.

Before joining Morgan & Morgan, Mr. Quesada worked as the Director of Liability Claims and Director of Claim Auditing for one of the country's largest auto insurers. During this time, Mike gained a wealth of knowledge on how insurance companies operate and litigate claims across The United States. He now employs this strategic knowledge in representing individuals and families who have been injured due to the negligence of others, particularly in automobile crashes.

Mr. Quesada is married, and he and his wife, Kate, have two sons and a golden retriever. In his free time, Mike enjoys the outdoors: fishing, SCUBA diving (as a certified instructor), and spending time with his friends and family.
