New England Law | Boston, J.D., Cum Laude, Intellectual Property Concentration

Alissa Samz joined Morgan & Morgan in 2024 to establish the firm's workers' compensation practice in Massachusetts. She represents injured workers throughout the commonwealth.

Attorney Samz graduated cum laude with her Juris Doctor from New England Law | Boston. While in law school, Ms. Samz served on the New England Law Review. She also served on the American Bar Association House of Delegates where she, along with the other state delegates, drafted, debated and voted on resolutions that established Association policy on professional and public issues.

Prior to joining Morgan & Morgan, Attorney Samz spent years representing plaintiffs in personal injury actions and workers' compensation claims. She understands that navigating workers' compensation benefits as an employee after being injured can be confusing and overwhelming. She believes in helping injured workers understand their rights when they are injured within the course of their employment and will vigorously work to protect those rights so that they may receive all the benefits they are entitled to.

Attorney Samz is a faculty adjunct at New England Law | Boston where she teaches Legal Research & Writing to law students and serves as a town elected official to the Town of North Andover School Committee.
