EDUCATION

University of Louisville, B.S.

University of Louisville, J.D.

Jeremy A. Collins is a dedicated attorney with a strong work ethic and a passion for advocating for the injured. Originally from rural western Kentucky, Jeremy gained valuable life experience working as a farmhand, coal miner, and successful business owner before pursuing a career in law. He brings that same grit, determination, and blue-collar mindset to every case he handles, ensuring his clients receive the strong representation they deserve.

Jeremy earned his Bachelor of Science in Economics from the University of Louisville before attending the Brandeis School of Law at the University of Louisville, where he graduated magna cum laude. His diverse background and legal education have shaped his approach to the law, allowing him to aggressively and effectively advocate for individuals who have been injured. Jeremy is bar-certified to practice law in Missouri, Kentucky, and Indiana, and he is committed to using his skills to fight for justice on behalf of his clients.

Outside of the office, Jeremy enjoys spending time outdoors with his dogs and staying active by playing tennis, basketball, and golf. His dedication to hard work and perseverance, both in and out of the courtroom, makes him a trusted advocate for those in need of legal representation.
