EDUCATION

Penn State University

Widener University School of Law

Peter D'Arcangelo is an accomplished attorney who transitioned from defense law to fulfill his passion for advocating for the injured. He graduated from Penn State University with a degree in economics and went on to earn his Juris Doctorate from Widener University School of Law. After law school, Peter clerked for the Honorable Anthony J. Mellaci, Jr., J.S.C. in Monmouth County, New Jersey.

After being admitted to the New Jersey Bar, Peter worked for a prominent national defense firm, eventually being promoted to partner, where he gained valuable experience in defense law. After several years practicing defense law, Peter realized that his true calling lay in representing those who have been injured. His transition to plaintiff's personal injury law was driven by his desire to make a positive impact and provide dedicated advocacy to individuals facing challenging legal situations. Peter's unique background in defense law brings a valuable perspective to his practice, allowing him to approach cases with a keen attention to detail and a deep understanding of the complexities involved. In recognition of his achievements and dedication to his clients, Peter has been honored as a NJ Super Lawyer Rising Star each year from 2018 - 2024, reflecting his commitment to excellence in legal representation.
