EDUCATION

Emory University School of Law, 2013

University of Georgia, 2009

Trevor Brice has been finding ways to give a voice to the voiceless for more than two decades. He worked as a newspaper journalist for almost ten years before becoming a lawyer, and that experience taught him that the best stories are those that focus on people. Now he uses that insight and his unique skill set to tell his clients' stories and achieve the best results possible for them.

Trevor has worked exclusively in litigation since graduating from Emory University School of Law in 2013. Clients know they can call Trevor any time, day or night, to talk about their cases, their treatment—or something completely unrelated to their injuries. His clients like talking to him because he genuinely likes talking to them.

Trevor is an active member of the Georgia Trial Lawyers Association and the Academy of Truck Accident Attorneys. When he is not fighting for his clients, he enjoys hiking, golfing, and traveling.
