Matthew Taulbee is a seasoned trial attorney at Morgan & Morgan, focusing his practice on dog bite and animal attack cases, negligent security, personal injury, premises liability, and wrongful death. He earned his undergraduate degree from Miami University in 2000 and went on to receive his Juris Doctor from Ohio Northern University's Claude W. Pettit College of Law in 2004. Since then, Matthew has developed a strong litigation background and has become known for his skillful, client-focused approach to complex injury cases.

He is admitted to practice in Ohio, Kentucky, and several federal courts, including the U.S. District Courts for the Southern and Northern Districts of Ohio, Western and Eastern Districts of Kentucky, and Northern and Southern Districts of Indiana. Matthew is also a member of the Ohio State Bar Association, Kentucky Bar Association, and Northern Kentucky Bar Association, where he currently serves as President. With over two decades of legal experience, he brings deep knowledge and unwavering dedication to every case he handles, working hard to achieve meaningful outcomes for those who have suffered harm due to negligence.

IN THEIR WORDS

"I was a successful athlete growing up and becoming a lawyer offered me a similar challenge of learning, training, preparation, practice, and ultimately attempting to outwork the competition and battling it out in the courtroom to get the results my clients looked to me to deliver."
