EDUCATION

George Mason University Law School

Virginia Tech

Bradley Vorv began his academic journey at Virginia Tech, where he majored in economics and minored in Spanish. His background in economics sharpened his analytical and problem-solving skills, while his Spanish studies strengthened his ability to communicate across diverse communities. He went on to earn his law degree from George Mason University Law School, where he focused on antitrust law and developed a strong interest in complex regulatory and litigation issues.

Before becoming an attorney, Bradley gained valuable legal experience working as a paralegal in family law and immigration law, giving him early exposure to client advocacy and case management. Although he has experience in patent infringement and business litigation, the majority of his legal practice has centered on personal injury matters.

Bradley is now an attorney at Morgan and Morgan's Washington DC office, where he focuses on car accident claims. He brings a thoughtful, analytical approach to each case, combining his economics background with practical litigation experience to advocate effectively for injured clients. Dedicated and detail-oriented, Bradley is committed to helping individuals navigate challenging circumstances with clarity and confidence.
