Joshua Taylor's journey is defined by a deep commitment to technical precision and service. He first spent six years serving in the United States Navy as an electronics technician, where he developed a rigorous work ethic and an eye for detail. Following his military service, Joshua transitioned into the private sector, spending thirteen years as a robotics repair technician and supervisor. This extensive background in high-level mechanics and leadership provided him with a unique perspective on how complex systems operate and the importance of accountability when things go wrong.

Driven by a desire to advocate for others, Joshua pivoted toward a career in law, earning his undergraduate degree from Southern New Hampshire University in 2018. He then attended the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law, where he excelled academically and graduated magna cum laude in 2024. During his legal studies, he gained invaluable experience interning at the EEOC to protect workers' rights and working with an insurance consultant to challenge insurance companies. These roles, followed by a year and a half at a small defense firm focusing on medical malpractice and civil rights cases, gave him a well-rounded understanding of the litigation process from multiple angles.

Today, Joshua serves as an attorney at the Morgan & Morgan office in Indianapolis. He focuses his practice on personal injury, premises liability, slip and fall cases, and animal attacks. By combining his technical troubleshooting skills with his high-level legal training, Joshua is a dedicated advocate for those in his community who have been injured through no fault of their own. He is proud to bring his diverse life experience and passion for justice to every case he handles.
