EDUCATION

Carleton College

William & Mary Law School

Stacey is a Minnesota native who has lived on both the East and West coasts and currently lives outside Minneapolis, MN. She specializes in large-scale eDiscovery projects in support of the firm's mass tort and class action litigation.

Stacey began her career with a Minneapolis firm representing government clients, including counties, cities, and school districts, where her practice focused primarily on labor and employment law. More recently, she worked for a prominent Minneapolis plaintiff's side law firm as both a Project Attorney and an eDiscovery Consultant.

Prior to attending law school, Stacey worked in the environmental field for an air pollution control agency in Seattle, Washington and for an environmental economic non-profit in Washington DC.

She graduated from Carleton College and received a law degree and a Master's in Public Policy from William and Mary. While in law school, she served on both the Environmental Law Journal and as an Editor of the William and Mary Law Review.

Stacey enjoys working on large, complex litigation matters, including data privacy, environmental litigation, and mass torts. She is a member of ACEDS, Women in eDiscovery, and the Minnesota State Bar Association.
