EDUCATION

Marshall University (2010)

Stetson University College of Law (2016)

Adam J. Campbell is a civil litigation attorney in Morgan & Morgan's Medical Malpractice Department, where he handles medical malpractice cases. Over his legal career, Mr. Campbell has developed a robust foundation in civil litigation and a deep commitment to client advocacy. He is a fierce champion for individuals navigating the legal system, fighting tirelessly to ensure their needs are prioritized and that they receive the justice and compensation they deserve.

Prior to joining Morgan & Morgan, Mr. Campbell spent the majority of his legal career practicing insurance defense, gaining invaluable insight into how defense firms and institutions evaluate and litigate claims. He subsequently transitioned to public interest and family law, serving as a Staff Attorney at Community Legal Services and as the sole attorney for the Injunction for Protection Program at the Family Life Center, both Florida-based nonprofit organizations. In these roles, he provided critical representation to survivors of domestic violence, honing his ability to navigate emotionally complex cases, quickly distill voluminous case files, and execute step-by-step litigation strategies with meticulous precision.

Throughout his career, Mr. Campbell has been recognized for his formidable litigation skills and exceptional legal research and writing abilities. He brings this same analytical approach and relentless dedication to client needs to his current practice, leveraging his extensive courtroom experience to hold negligent parties and institutions fully accountable.

Based in Daytona Beach, Florida, Mr. Campbell is deeply committed to serving his community and upholding the highest standards of the legal profession.
