University of Pittsburgh School of Law, 2007, cum laude

Ryan Carroll joined Morgan and Morgan for the opportunity to start the workers' compensation group in the Pittsburgh Office. Ryan is passionate about helping people who are at their lowest, making sure that they feel heard and seen while he pursues justice on their behalf. Supercharged by America's Largest Injury Firm, Ryan is excited about the ways he will leverage the firm's resources with his knowledge and experience to help and protect the hard-working people of Western Pennsylvania.

Ryan began his legal career serving the public as a prosecutor in the Allegheny County District Attorney's Office. In that role, he gained invaluable experience regularly representing the Commonwealth in both jury and bench trials.

Next, Ryan moved to a mid-size, regional defense firm focusing his representation on employer's and insurance carriers. This opportunity to "see behind the curtain" and learn the tactics and strategies that insurance companies use to save money at the expense of innocent and injured people sparked a passion that continues to burn to this day.

For the next decade, Ryan worked for a local advertising law firm where he represented individuals in a wide array of matters, including workers' compensation, motor vehicle accidents, premises liability, dog bites, and employment discrimination.

The son of a plumber and public school teacher, Ryan has never forgotten his blue-collar upbringing and credits it for his work ethic and worldview. Ryan prides himself on his efforts to get to know each client personally so that he can best tell their story and has achieved tremendous success with this approach.

When he's not working, Ryan enjoys an early morning workout, hiking, biking, reading and spending time with the people he loves.
