EDUCATION

University of Colorado at Boulder - 2008

California Western School of Law - 2011

When Mark was a kid, his mother was hit in a bad car crash. She never fully recovered. The insurance company was not held accountable. There was no justice, no real compensation — just a woman left to deal with permanent injuries on her own. That's the thing that stuck with Mark. Not the accident itself, but what came after: the feeling that the system simply didn't care.

Mark became a lawyer to make sure that doesn't happen to anyone else.

Today, as a trial attorney at Morgan & Morgan, Mark brings that same urgency to every case he takes. With over 14 years of litigation experience and more than $35 million recovered for his clients, he has fought for thousands of injured people across multiple states — in courtrooms, at mediation, and wherever the fight demands.

Mark has built his reputation on turning "unwinnable" cases into life-changing results. Insurance companies dispute liability, blame the victim, and bet that your lawyer will fold. Mark doesn't fold.

$7.35 Million — Motorcycle crash where the other side disputed liability. Mark proved otherwise.
$7 Million — A worker fell through a skylight on the job. The defense fought hard. Mark fought harder.
$1.65 Million — Hospital staff failed to report a patient's seizure. Mark held them accountable.
$1.25 Million — E-bike rider struck by a vehicle. No helmet, against traffic, police found the client at fault. Mark still recovered over a million dollars.
$1 Million — A house fire caused by a pinched electrical cord. The client was blamed for leaving the light on. Mark turned a case most firms would reject into a seven-figure recovery.

Mark earned his undergraduate degree from the University of Colorado, before receiving his Juris Doctor from California Western School of Law. He is admitted to practice in multiple states and brings a national litigation perspective to his caseload.

When he's not working, Mark can be found spending time with his wife and toddler son, and pretending he knows how to golf,
