EDUCATION

Saint Leo University, 2015

Emory University School of Law, 2022

Originally from New York City, Rebecca Johnson relocated to Jacksonville, Florida, in 2010, driven by a lifelong interest in the legal field and a deep passion for advocacy. She went on to pursue her undergraduate studies at Saint Leo University, where she excelled and graduated in 2015. With a firm commitment to helping others, she later moved to Georgia to attend the prestigious Emory University School of Law. During her time in law school, she focused on developing a sharp legal mind and mastering strategic advocacy, ultimately earning her Juris Doctor in 2022.

Following her legal training, Rebecca dedicated her talents to working in dependency law, where she stood up for some of the community's most vulnerable children and families. Navigating these highly emotional and complex circumstances allowed her to lean into empathy, which she considers one of her greatest strengths. This profound experience sharpened her detail-oriented approach to case management and strengthened her unique ability to remain deeply compassionate, focused, and composed while guiding individuals through incredibly difficult and stressful life situations.

Today, Rebecca brings her powerful blend of emotional intelligence, strategic thinking, and rigorous training to the Morgan & Morgan family, where she fights effectively to ensure her clients receive the justice and support they deserve. She prides herself on being both a sharp strategist in the legal arena and a comforting ally to those she represents. Outside of her demanding work at the office, Rebecca loves to fuel her adventurous spirit through travel and enjoys staying energized and active by hitting the gym regularly.
