EDUCATION

University of North Georgia - 2021

Mercer School of Law - 2024

Ben hails from Athens, Georgia, and has lived in Atlanta for more than a decade. A former professional musician, he eventually felt drawn to the law and the idea of using his mind and interpersonal skills to advocate for others, helping them to navigate a complex legal system when it matters most. Compelled by this new calling, he earned his bachelor's degree in history from the University of North Georgia and completed his law degree at Mercer University, finishing both in under five years.

Ben began his legal career in criminal defense, where he sharpened his litigation skills while navigating complex felony matters and advocating for his clients when their lives were on the line. His path then led him to the to the insurance defense side of the workers' compensation field, giving him firsthand insight into how employers and insurers handle claims and how injured workers are often placed at a disadvantage. At Morgan & Morgan, he uses this experience to guide clients through the system with clarity, consistency, and a strong commitment to fighting for their rights.

Outside of work, Ben enjoys reading history and the great literary works, playing and listening to music, and reflecting on the vast intricacies of life. He values time with family and friends and is always learning—whether through books, conversation, or pure curiosity.
