Christopher Norris Reilly, Jr. has devoted his career to standing up for people who have been injured through no fault of their own. A seasoned trial attorney, he has represented clients in cases ranging from car accidents and slip-and-falls to wrongful death and general liability claims—recovering tens of millions of dollars on their behalf.

Christopher earned his undergraduate degrees in both Business and Psychology from the University of Alabama and his law degree from Mercer University School of Law. He is licensed to practice in Georgia's State and Superior Courts, the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the U.S. District Courts for the Northern and Middle Districts of Georgia.

Based in Peachtree City, Georgia, Christopher lives with his wife, Riley, and their two sons, Christopher L. Reilly III and Matthew P. Reilly. When he's not in the courtroom, you'll likely find him watching college football, playing golf, or enjoying a good trivia game.
