Tepezza® Lawsuit

A GUIDE

Tepezza® (or teprotumumab) is an FDA-approved injectable drug used to treat the symptoms of thyroid eye disease (TED). However, this medication has recently been linked to permanent hearing loss and tinnitus, which is a chronic ringing in the ears.

Patients who received Tepezza® have been reported to suffer irreversible hearing damage, and victims of the drug's side effects are now filing lawsuits.

According to the lawsuits, the labels on the drug did not warn patients or doctors about the potential risk for hearing loss nor did it warn how these issues could be permanent to those taking the eye drug. While initial clinical trials documented only 10% of patients reporting hearing issues, a 2021 study found that patients taking Tepezza® are at a 65% higher risk for developing temporary and even permanent hearing issues—over six times higher than the original estimated risk of hearing loss disclosed during the FDA approval process.

If you or someone you love has taken Tepezza® and suffered from hearing loss or other hearing issues, you may be eligible for compensation. Call Morgan & Morgan today to have your case reviewed at no cost to you.

Our Fee Is Free™—you only pay if we win your case.

Frequently Asked Questions

WHAT ARE THE SYMPTOMS AND SIDE EFFECTS LINKED TO TEPEZZA®?

Patients who received Tepezza® injections have reported various symptoms and side effects, including:

- Hearing loss (partial/permanent)
- Tinnitus

WHO IS ELIGIBLE TO FILE A TEPEZZA® LAWSUIT?

In order to qualify to file a Tepezza® lawsuit, you must have taken the drug and have experienced permanent or persistent hearing loss. Speaking to an attorney can help you to better understand your eligibility and the compensation you may be owed.

WHAT CAN I RECOVER FROM A TEPEZZA® LAWSUIT?

Every case is unique, but people who successfully file drug or medical device lawsuits can recover money for some of the following damages:

- Past and future medical bills (including medication, hospital stays, and in-home care)
- Pain and suffering
- Lost Wages
- Loss of earning capacity

HOW CAN AN ATTORNEY HELP?

Tepezza® cases can be complicated, and you may not know which legal route will yield the best possible outcome. When you team up with an attorney, they can offer you legal advice and can bring their experience and understanding to any situation that may arise throughout your case. Their expertise is also helpful if a third party tries to undervalue the full extent of your damages.

CAN I AFFORD TO HIRE AN ATTORNEY?
